

Heartache That Don't Stop Hurting

Jason Aldean

I've been here a bunch of times
It all starts with the same old lines
It's over, baby, it's over Nothing 'bout it ever feels good
It knocks you down just like it should
But it goes away, it always goes away But something about this time feels different
Just like I'm in a fight I'm about to lose This might be the heartache that don't stop hurting
That just keeps working on me
That just keeps picking on me And these might be the tears that keep on falling
That won't stop coming on down
They won't stop raining on down
Maybe it's too early to know for certain
This might be the heartache that don't stop hurting Man, I tried to kill the pain
By shooting whiskey through my brain
But it never works, it only makes it worse So tonight I'm here again
Throwing punches in the wind
At some enemy that I can't even see And I know I don't want to let it have me
But every time it hits I feel the truth This might be the heartache that don't stop hurting
That just keeps working on me
That just keeps picking on me And these might be the tears that keep on falling
That won't stop coming on down
They won't stop raining on down
Maybe it's too early to know for certain
This might be the heartache that don't stop hurting Tomorrow I'll stand up again
And give it my best shot again
But tonight it sure feels like These might be the tears that keep on falling
That won't stop coming on down
They won't stop raining on down And maybe it's too early to know for certain
But this might be the heartache that don't stop hurting
It just won't stop hurting
