You and Me and the Moon

The Magnetic Fields

Brian Wilson 1960 and vine Summer kisses In a pendleton shirt Songs and gentle words Granted wishesWhen I look in your eyes I go soft inside And the sound of your voice sends Shivers up my spine And at the slightest touch we're in love You and me and the moon In a cool gay bar where the people are entertaining When the sun pops in we'll still be talking and champagningUnderneath the strobe light We'll dance all night I'm a little bit shy, you're easy on the eye And at the slightest touch we're in love You and me and the moon When you look in my eyes I go soft inside And the sound of your voice sends Shivers up my spine And at the slightest touch we're in love You and me and the moon
