

Stranger to Myself

Dierks Bentley

Found some old forgotten photographs, yeah
Looking at 'em kinda made me laugh at the
Big hair and the drunk smile
I ain't seen 'em in quite a while
I've been lucky to live two lives
But I wouldn't wanna live that one twice
Yeah the past is best left on the shelf I was a stranger to myself, before you came along
Who I was back then is like an old forgotten song
You showed me who I am, you handed me the keys
And I unlocked the door to the better part of me Without your love I'd still be
Someone else, a stranger to myself
Just sitting on the porch with you
Knowing now what I never knew like
How much more to life there is
When you have someone to share it with
You stretched this heart of mine
A million miles wide
You wouldn't even recognize the old me I was a stranger to myself, before you came along
Who I was back then is like an old forgotten song
You showed me who I am, you handed me the keys
And I unlocked the door to the better part of me Without your love, I'd still be
Someone else, a stranger to myself Without your love, without your kiss Show me what life really is
I never wanna go back there again
To when I was a stranger to myself, before you came along
Who I was back then is like an old forgotten song
You showed me who I am, you handed me the keys
And I unlocked the door to the better part of me Without your love, I'd still be
Someone else, a stranger to myself Found some old forgotten photographs, yeah
Looking at 'em kinda made me laugh at the
Big hair and the drunk smile
I ain't seen 'em in quite a while
Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by <http://counterlikes.com/>