

Fly Before You Fall

Cynthia Erivo

I see the way that you look when you hear his name
I see his picture up in your frame And you refuse to admit you still miss him but Its okay
You're a tower of strength when you're breaking down
But through the wall i can feel your cry
And when its quiet your screaming inside
And I break as I hear you Loud as a bomb Wanting a shoulder to cry on
And I hear you tumbling fast
Here and now
You're afraid
Don't you worry
I'll teach you to fly before you fall away its in the moments when you're left all on your own And it hits you from out of nowhere You try to hide it sometimes unsuccessfully with a smile that fades quickly your resistant to sadness is futile but you're a fighter can't stand defeat you're a magican at hiding the hurt from you but I see and i hear you loud as a bomb
wanting a shoulder to cry on i hear you tumbling fast
here and now
you're afraid
dont be scared
dont be scared
cause i hear you loud as a bomb
wanting a shoulder to cry on
i hear you tumbling fast
here and now
you're afraid
dont you worry i'll teach you to fly before you fall
