

The Light from One

Ane Brun

I am holding your torch
I won't hold it no more
You can have it, take it, use it I am holding your torch
I won't hold it no more
You can have it, take it, use it I'll need both my hands to hold my own
I need only one light I'm in your room
We've been here for weeks now
Your windows are painted
With nothing real
I hear music, filtering through it all
I press my ear against the wall
I'll need both my hands to hold my own
I need only one light Before it gets dark
Before it's all gone
I know I have to put yours down
The light is going dim
My torches, they are both fading I'll need both my hands to hold my own
I need only one light I'll need both my hands to hold my own
I need only one light
I'll need both my hands
I'll need both my hands
I'll need both my hands
I'll need both my hands I'll need both my hands to hold my own
I need only one light
