

Some Things

Big Bad Voodoo Daddy

On the 8th of November
I remember telling her that we'd be together forever
But things have changed
Now re rearranged we are now no longer together It was the way she spoke, my heart broke
I thought that I would never love again
But then you came along, so I changed my song
With you my life would never be the same An' things have changed, and they're only getting better
An' things have changed, and they're only getting better
It was the day you were born, my attention was torn
I no longer only thought of myself
You see, there's half of you and half of me
And that love really set's me free So now the moral to this tale is if your love should fail
Pick your heart up off the ground
You see, love comes down when you're nowhere around
It's just the way things have got to be An' things have changed, and they're only getting better
An' things have changed, and they're only getting better
An' things have changed, and they're only getting better
An' things have changed, and they're only getting better An' things have changed, and they're only getting better
An' things have changed, and they're only getting better, yeah
An' things have changed, and they're only getting better
An' things have changed, and they're only getting better
A better a better a better
An' things have changed, and they're only getting better, yeah
An' things have changed, and they're only getting better, yeah
An' things have changed, and they're only getting better
An' things have changed, and they're only getting better, yeah

Lyrics provided by <http://counterlikes.com/>